

Summer Resource Guide

(Updated June 22, 2020)

Disclaimer: The inclusion of camps or programs on this list in no way constitutes an endorsement of them. In all cases, it is your responsibility to inform yourselves of program details and evaluate whether a particular option is right for your child. We have not formally vetted these programs nor have we evaluated them in terms of general or COVID-specific safety practices.

As the challenges of a school year like none other begin to recede, we recognize that parents now confront the challenges of summer. The summer camp landscape is evolving rapidly and it appears that at least some in-person camps will run this season, depending on your location. For this guide, we have focused on virtual camps and programs anticipating (1) that the availability of live camps will be particularly limited and (2) regardless of availability, some families may not feel comfortable with out-of-home programs under the current circumstances.

As you make your decisions for summer, please consider:

- Policies and guidelines are changing rapidly. If you have a particular program in mind—whether it appears on this list or not—contact it directly for the most up-to-date information.
- Stay informed of state, city and local policy announcements, which necessarily inform policies and practices.
- Make the decisions that feel right for you and your family. With so much continued uncertainty, each family must decide, based on available information, what kinds of activities and socializing feel right this summer.

While the list is certainly not exhaustive, it represents a variety of disciplines and interests at a range of prices with offerings for students from K-12. It is our hope that it will be useful to a broad range of Columbia families. We will continue to update this guide with more programs and more information. Please visit these pages again.
