

Welcome to New York

We hope the information here is helpful as you explore and settle in.

As spring arrives and as your time allows, you can step out your front door, pick a direction and walk for hours! You will always discover something new and interesting along the way. The five boroughs offer incredible richness of culture and diversity in one concentrated geographic area and yet, you can travel just two hours north for peaceful mountain settings or two hours east for some of the most beautiful beaches on the east coast. Whatever you choose, we hope you enjoy!

Throughout your time at Columbia, the Office of Work/Life will always be here to support you with needs that you may have now or in the future.

Libraries and Bookstores

In addition to the globally recognized Columbia University Libraries, there is also the excellent NYPL. With over 90 branches and expansive collections, NYPL has been an essential resource for all NYC residents for more than 100 years. Sign up for a library card and request books online to either receive an electronic version (if available), or to pick up a hard copy at one of over 50 grab-and-go locations. The closest location to Columbia is the Morningside Heights branch located at 2900 Broadway, between 113th and 114th Streets.

There are many notable bookstores in NYC, but here are a few favorites:

Columbia Bookstore – located inside Lerner Hall and accessible from Broadway and 115th Street.
Book Culture – two locations, 114th Street and Broadway, and 112th Street between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue.
Shakespeare & Co. – currently three locations, Broadway on the corner of 105th Street, Broadway between 69th and 70th Streets, and Lexington Avenue between 68th and 69th Streets.
Strand Bookstore – two locations, the main one on Broadway and 12th Street, and Columbus Avenue between 81st and 82nd Streets.
The Corner Bookstore – located on Madison Avenue and 93rd Street, noted for its many author readings and book signings.

Green and Farmers’ Markets

With over 50 green markets and 15 farm stands, Grow NYC ensures that all New Yorkers have access to the freshest, most nutritious locally grown food the region has to offer. Some of the best ones are located at Union Square (M, W, F, Sa), Inwood (Sa), and outside of Columbia’s gates on Broadway from 114th – 116th Streets (Th, Sun). There is another local farmers’ market not connected to Grow NYC located on the southeast corner of Morningside Park at 110th Street and Manhattan Avenue on Saturday mornings.

Some Local Recommendations (and some further afield)

Map of the immediate area with neighborhood names

Places

- Take a walk through Brooklyn Bridge Park. Start at Atlantic Ave (Pier 6) and head toward the DUMBO/Brooklyn Bridge area. It has amazing views of Manhattan and is a lovely place to take a stroll and people watch.
- All of Central Park – but in particular, the Central Park Conservatory Garden (located at 105th Street and Fifth Avenue in the park), and all the seasonal activities - particularly Shakespeare in the Park (currently closed for renovation), Summer Stage, free concerts from The New York Philharmonic, and The Metropolitan Opera – just to name a few.
- The Museum of the City of NY - right across the street from the Conservatory Garden.
- Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Peace Fountain – concerts and art exhibits are held throughout the year inside the cathedral's cavernous space (Amsterdam Avenue between 111th to 113th Streets).
- The Highline
- New York Botanical Garden (in the Bronx)
- Brooklyn Botanic Garden (in Brooklyn)
- The rooftop terrace of The Metropolitan Museum of Art offers spectacular views of Central Park, the New York skyline, and a featured artist exhibit. Usually open April through October with a small drink and snack bar available.
- The Cloisters and the Heather Garden in Ft. Tryon Park
- Wave Hill (Bronx)
- Walk around Chinatown and be sure to go for dim sum—there's usually a long wait but worth it—just check when they are serving, as timing varies (these are fun for big groups and for kids, too, because you can share and taste lots of options).
Jing Fong: They have a small location on 78th and Amsterdam and a huge one in Chinatown.
Golden Unicorn: The largest and most famous.
Nom Wah: Smaller but great food.
- Go all the way crosstown and walk along the East River promenade from around the mid-'70s to the low '90s, great views of the river, Queens, Roosevelt Island and more. (There's also a great playground, dog run and places to picnic around Carl Schultz Park that runs from 84th Street to 86th Street off East End Avenue). You can also check out Gracie Mansion, the home of the mayor.

- Walk around the Lower East Side – although it has changed a lot in the past few years, there are still some places that have been around for generations:
Economy Candy
Knishery
Katz's Delicatessen
Russ and Daughters
- Just north of the LES is the East Village, home of the not-to-be missed Ukrainian diner, Veselka, 9th Street and 2nd Ave. Open 24 hours. Try the perogies and potato pancakes.

Utilitarian Concerns

- Andrade Shoe Repair, corner of 105th Street and Broadway
- University Hardware and Housewares – great for a variety of kitchen, bathroom and closet needs, as well as a basic hardware store, Broadway between 113th and 114th Streets.
